

What We Wore

We wore burlap thongs.

We wore bulletproof diapers.

We wore denim raincoats.

We wore tinfoil negligees.

We wore turtleneck/cargo shorts onesies.

We wore grapeskin tube socks.

We wore jumper cables as suspenders.

We wore bathrobes wrapped around our faces.

We wore porcelain corsets.

We wore spray-on condoms.

We sewed cherry tomatoes together with needle and thread and wore them like pearls.

We wore bat pelt brassieres.

We walked in sandals of cantaloupe rinds.

We wore newspaper tiaras.

We wore ridicule-proof fedoras.

We wore solar panel-plated samurai armor.

We wore sand dollar corsages.

We wore pull-away full British redcoat regalia.

We wore rocket packs whose thrusters looked like nostrils.

We wore sequined sealskin bodices.

We wore glass gloves.

We wore glass-colored mascara.

We wore machine gun nests in our up-dos.

We wore earrings from which swung cherries the size of cannon balls.

We wore stovepipe hats that prevented dementia.

We wore fishnet eyepatches.

We wore clown shoes covered in mildew.

We wore crowns of thorns that prevented déjà vu.
